

The Graduate School of Banking has a long, proud tradition of educating bankers and creating leaders in our great industry. While banking has changed over seven decades, our commitment to integrity and community has not.

We understand the anxiety and uncertainty that surrounds COVID-19 -- and while the situation will be fluid for some time, we remain steadfast in our commitment to doing the right things for our students, staff and faculty.

That's why we're offering risk free enrollment for 2020 specialty schools and the 2021 GSB session. If you apply this year for any GSB school and can't or choose not to attend due to the coronavirus you won't risk a penny -- not even the $350 enrollment deposit that is typically non-refundable.

We've seen extremely strong enrollment for all of our schools -- and have until recently been on pace to sell out our programs. We are very hopeful that once this situation is behind us our programs will fill quickly and to capacity. However, for everyone's peace of mind, this flexible policy will allow you and your teams to secure a place in class without concern of cancellation.

Applications are currently being accepted for the following programs:

Graduate School of Banking - next session: August 1-13, 2021

Earn the prestigious Certificate of Executive Education from the Wisconsin School of Business' Center for Professional and Executive Development at no additional tuition. Please note that returning GSB students do not need to re-apply.

Financial Managers School - September 20-25, 2020

Sales and Marketing School - September 27 - October 2, 2020

Bank Technology Security School - October 11-16, 2020

The following programs were rescheduled from March 2020; if you're interested in attending the next sessions, please click here and we'll keep you informed.
